Epilogue

Dr. Bobby Doscher

President and CEO of “Oklahaven” Children’s Chiropractic Center

“A perfect example of the Think & Grow Rich principles is exhibited when the mother has a firm grip on the vision of seeing her child well.” — Dr. Bobby Doscher

Dr. Bobby Doscher is President and CEO of Oklahaven Children’s Chiropractic Center, which provides chiropractic to severely sick and handicapped children. Originally founded in 1962 by a volunteer group of six D.C.s as the “Children’s Chiropractic Center of Oklahoma,” the Center was quickly dubbed “Oklahaven” since it did, indeed, serve as a haven for children and their families, many of whom had been dismissed by the medical profession as beyond help. Doscher -- a Palmer graduate from Philadelphia

-- joined the group in 1977 and, under her leadership, the Center expanded to serve even more children, conduct research and to educate people about the benefits of a natural, drug-free health care and the chiropractic way of life. Doscher and her staff have also traveled to Jordan, Guatemala, Poland, Russia, Germany, Netherlands, Ireland, Greece, Czech Republic, Honduras, Austria, New Zealand and Australia to teach about chiropractic and/or provide services to children in those areas.

Epilogue

I first read Think and Grow Rich in the 1960's when I was traveling the world as an International Flight Attendant. This book gave me tools - the power of thoughts, vision, and desire that I needed. I found that I could only save $5,000 it seemed – never getting past it. Therefore, I realized I needed to have another account. I opened another account. Seeing my limitations and using my creative mind allowed me to override my pattern. With this money I was able to enroll in Palmer College of Chiropractic, which would ultimately change my life.

I was reintroduced to the book again as a chiropractic student. When I accepted the position in 1977 at Oklahaven Children's Chiropractic Center and the position of President/CEO in 1979, I remembered the wisdom found in this wonderful book. I reread it to help me ground, direct, and discipline myself to lead the Center and show the way back to health for hundreds of severely hurt children. With time I learned to open one account for each of my needs – bills, house, business, vacation, taxes, personal savings, & investments.

As I look back, it is increasingly obvious that Napoleon Hill's economic principles provided the precise formula that I needed to steer the clinic through the years, and I came to realize that they were also the same principles needed for the mother of the severely ill child to regain health and an abundant life.

From the very beginning, Oklahaven has attracted only parents of profoundly hurt children. These mothers came with faith that there was hope for their children to be well. It was my job to encourage the inner vision of each of these special mothers to see her child obtain his health, reach his full potential, and be able to give back to life.

At Oklahaven, we know that each child is an individual gift with an undeveloped potential. It is vitally important that the parents see the spirit of the child inside and be unwilling to accept labels or diagnoses such as failure to thrive, cerebral palsy, or the autistic spectrum but instead see the wholeness of the child. Chiropractors believe that labels are limiting and that the subluxation, or lack of power within the body, is the root cause of dis-ease which shuts down the innate intelligence of the body. We believe in the power of the adjustment which allows the body to heal itself.

Because the chiropractic premise is often foreign to new patients, education is one of our first tasks. Simply understanding that the “the power that makes the body, heals the body” is the first major step. The chiropractic premise refers to this power as the innate intelligence because it is within the human body. I have seen this force restore wholeness to the most profoundly hurt child. The body regains its power and then balances itself, restoring function and then full function.

A perfect example of the Think & Grow Rich principles is exhibited when the mother has a firm grip on the vision of seeing her child well. At this point, she is ready to embrace the chiropractic lifestyle for her child. We have observed the mothers achieve this goal when they took their power back and did not allow fear to enter, created a plan, found the way to make the time, and money for the frequent adjustments, to buy and prepare the whole foods and to take care of her entire family.

This special mother knew in her heart that she could not be rich in spirit, life, or money while her child was dysfunctional. She realized that her main duty was to give service and to heal her child. No one else could - not the medical community or government aid, but only the mother's desire and unwavering faith in her child.

She had to be persistent and self-reliant guarding against allowing fear, discouragement, other's thoughts or comments, or a seemingly easier journey to take her off her path. Her greatest ally was her inner vision of her child reaching his optimal potential. She had to learn to stay in the moment to have the discipline to control her mind and dispel the many fears – real or unreal. Her challenge was neither looking back nor fearing the future but giving the joy of service to her child and family.

This is not an easy journey with its ups and downs, which we call “the rollercoaster.” This could include the child’s behavior, bodily discharges (diarrhea, vomiting, fever, seizure), husbands losing jobs or leaving her and the family. This special mother had to learn how to care for her entire family, yet stay focused on her profoundly hurt child. This is why I call these mothers the “Holy Ones.” Their path is tough, but they stay true to the course with inner vision giving them wisdom and freedom.

Yes, many others tried to discourage or persuade her to abandon this journey, especially family and friends, but she remained committed to the path and believed in the greater force of life. Ultimately with her persistence, she was shown the way each time she faced these challenges.

Her determination and strong sense of gratitude gave her an appreciation for the small changes, which led to the big changes. Through this she discovered the natural growth process of her child, the responsibility of parenting, the love of God, and the gift of life. All of this brought about a more abundant life.

“Oklahaven” Children’s Chiropractic Center will celebrate its 50th anniversary in 2011. All of our work has been accomplished privately without state, federal, or United Way funding. The tenets of Napoleon Hill’s book “Think & Grow Rich”, have allowed children and their families to grow into a more abundant life. As in his book, their journey to health began with a thought, a desire, and a vision to accomplish the seemingly impossible.

I have been honored to see the vision in the mother’s eyes, the miracle each day of a child hearing, seeing, walking, or talking for the first time, and the vision of individuals who believed in the children. I am grateful to Napoleon Hill for giving me the formula not only to improve my life personally, but to share his insights and wisdom with the world, especially for the profoundly hurt children.

Notes from the editors:

An epilogue, or epilog, is a piece of writing at the end of a work of literature or drama, usually used to bring closure to the work. The writer or the person may deliver a speech, speaking directly to the reader, when bringing the piece to a close or the narration may continue normally to a closing scene. The word epilogue means to conclude a story or piece of writing.

In literature, an epilogue is a final chapter at the end of a story that often serves to reveal the fates of the characters. Some epilogues may feature scenes only tangentially related to the subject of the story. They can be used to hint at a sequel or wrap up all the loose ends. They can occur at a significant period after the main plot has ended. In some cases, the epilogue has been used to allow the main character a chance to ‘speak freely’. An epilogue can continue in the same narrative style and perspective as the preceding story, although the form of an epilogue can occasionally be drastically different from the overall story. When the author steps in and speaks directly to the reader that is more properly considered an afterword.

We have chosen Dr. Bobby Doscher to write the epilogue for this book. The association of Napoleon Hill and chiropractic began with the introduction of the world’s first Chiropractic Hospital for children. Therefore, I feel it is pertinent to end this book, with an epilogue from the president and CEO of the Oklahaven Children’s Hospital, Dr. Bobby Doscher.

“This little book is a testament to the success philosophy of Napoleon Hill. It is filled with riches of life and its philosophy permeates the very substance of what we call, chiropractic.”

— Dr. Matt Hammett

When we began the process for this book, we also contacted the recently deceased Dr. William Harris. He was Napoleon Hill’s chiropractor and friend. Together they helped promote chiropractic in the early 1960’s. W. Clement Stone also was involved with Napoleon Hill and asked Dr. Hill to help build the first chiropractic Hospital, called the Kentuckiana Children's Chiropractic Hospital. Dr. Harris was over enthusiastic with our idea for this book. He had every intention to do an interview with us. However, just days later, he passed away.

I am certain Dr. Harris and Dr. Hill would want to continue leaving a legacy for the chiropractic profession with the creation of this book.

This little book is a testament to the success philosophy of Napoleon Hill. It is filled with riches of life and its philosophy permeates the very substance of what we call, chiropractic. Dr. Doscher was instrumental with contacting Dr. Harris before he died. We know Dr. Harris would want her to write for this most important book for the chiropractic profession.
